Constructions of identity and embodiment in the discourse of trans youth: A queer and trans linguistic approach

Prof. Dr. Lucy Jones (University of Nottingham)

In this guest lecture, Dr Jones uses discourse analysis informed by queer and trans theory to explain identity construction as it occurs in a conversation between young trans people. In this conversation, the young people describe their experiences of being rendered powerless through misgendering or misrepresentation, revealing cisnormative expectations around trans people's embodiment. It is shown that they resist these expectations by reframing the language used by others to describe their bodies, and that they gain agency as a result.
