“A Whiff of Canada: A Culinary Tour through Canadian History and Literature”

In this lecture, the topic of food and drink will be used for a tour d’horizon through Canadian history and literature. Food and drink are not just something one needs to keep one’s belly happy, but its types, preparation, and consumption are part of one’s cultural and social set-up. The texts which mention food and drink for different purposes date from the 17th to the 20th century and range from literature to history to folklore and First Nations mythology and tell us much about their writers’/storytellers’ cultural contexts.
